Broadway Subway Project Cultural Recognition Art Installation-
Open call to artists for Glass Art
* Updated deadline Submission deadline: JULY 29, 2022

PROJECT DESCRIPTION: SQUAMISH NATION PUBLIC ART OPPORTUNITY

Ta na wa Yúus ta Stitúyntsam Rights and Title reviews projects within Squamish Nation Territory. When projects have met Cultural, Archaeological and Environmental expectations, Rights and Title also negotiates for Cultural Recognition opportunities for Squamish Nation artists.

This call for public art by Ta na wa Yúus ta Stitúyntsam deals specifically with the opportunity presented by Squamish Nation and the Broadway Subway Project. The purpose of this public art opportunity is to acknowledge Squamish Nation culture. This will be a legacy project for commuters to see.

The artwork will be located at the Oak-VGH station, at the head house on street level. This artwork will be sharing the station head house space with two other Squamish Nation public art opportunities.

PROJECT CONTEXT

The Project is an approximately 5.7 km extension of the SkyTrain Millennium Line from VCC-Clark Station to a new terminus at Broadway and Arbutus Street, with six new underground stations. It will provide fast, frequent and convenient SkyTrain service to the Broadway Corridor, serving B.C.'s second largest jobs centre, world-class health services, and emerging innovation and research hub, and growing residential communities. Project construction commenced in Fall 2020 with the new extension going into service in late 2025. Once in service, the Project will be operated and maintained by TransLink. More details on the Project can be found at the following site: broadwaysubway.ca

Station art is a key component of the SkyTrain system and is featured at many stations and/or station plazas along the SkyTrain alignment and at all existing Millennium Line stations. Art at transit stations is recognized as beneficial in encouraging ridership, improving perceptions of transit, contributing to wayfinding, and enhancing community identity.

DESIGN GUIDELINES FOR SQUAMISH NATION PUBLIC ART OPPORTUNITY

- Celebrate, recognize, and give space to the Squamish Nation on whose traditional territory the artwork is to be located;
- Spark awareness to the community of traditional Coast Salish territory and culture;
- Reflective of Squamish Nation Coast Salish design and imagery;
- The ways the artwork is experienced - from fleeting glimpses to sustained examination and engagement over time;
- Safety and security of the artwork, with consideration for the need to maintain uninterrupted transit circulation and sightlines;
- Potential impacts to the station interior design including level of lighting; and
- Durability of art application and fabrication methods, colour fastness and installation requirements, including the need for maintenance and operation.

Public art should also meet the following technical criteria:

- The artwork should be robust and durable. Artwork and its associated components, systems and attachment shall be able to withstand the test of time, the elements, and potential interaction of a large number of transit users;
- The artwork should not require ongoing readjustments or extraordinary maintenance (see Life Expectancy of Artwork);

- The artwork should meet public safety, security and maintenance standards; and
- The artwork should not create negative interactions with persons with disabilities, including people with visual impairments. Detailed design parameters and technical criteria will be provided to the artists during the concept design stage to ensure design proposals meet safety, operation and maintenance standards.

LIFE EXPECTANCY OF ARTWORK

The minimum life expectancy for station art, and all systems, attachments and anchorage associated with the artwork, is ten (10) years. However, it is expected that many artworks will be on display for at least 25 to 30 years.

Artwork should withstand the test of time and should not require ongoing readjustments and extraordinary maintenance. Artworks are expected to require little maintenance during their lifespans other than annual cleaning performed by a third-party general contractor.

Successful artist will be responsible for submitting a written maintenance plan for their artwork. This plan will need to outline how the art piece is to be cleaned and maintained over its lifespan.
